

Peace of Mind for Families Without Cameras or Wearables

What This Is

This page explains an awareness option (Alerta Home) that can help families remain informed, while respecting dignity, independence, and privacy.

Families working with social workers often ask how they can stay informed about an older adult's well-being at home—without monitoring, surveillance, or intrusion.

Alerta Home is a passive awareness system that detects meaningful changes in daily movement or activities, without cameras, recorders, or wearables.

Who This Is For

- Adult children supporting an aging parent.
- Families navigating transitions, stress, or uncertainty.
- Situations where safety awareness is needed without escalation.
- Those who seek more effective solutions than cameras or wearables.

When Families Typically Consider This

- Adult children supporting an aging parent.
- Families navigating transitions, stress, or uncertainty.
- Situations where safety awareness is needed without escalation.
- Those who seek more effective solutions than cameras or wearables.
